Clinical Trial of Expanded Advance Care Planning to Address Regimen Intensity in Older Patients at High Risk for Treatment-Induced Hypoglycemia

Advance care planning (ACP) is a well-established paradigm that supports older individuals in defining their values, goals, and preferences for future medical care. The goal of this study is to apply the patient-centered ACP paradigm of values elicitation and decision-making and communication preparation to the specific clinical problem of hypoglycemia-related adverse outcomes in vulnerable older patients with T2D. We plan to conduct a randomized clinical trial comparing the new ACP-T2D tool to usual care among older (75+ yrs) English- and Spanish-speaking patients at increased risk for hypoglycemic events.
